Every please of of land which is to be used permanently as a pasture should have some shade trees on it. If there are none which grow naturally, efforts should be made to encourage a few to grow around the matering-place and on the tops of the hills. Where they come corr since. Half bewildered at the sinthe tops of the hills. Where they come up naturally they should be encouraged in all parts of the field, but not too thick; if they are take or maples, ten to twenty trees to the are are enough; if pine or handeck, the smallest number would be too many, for while scattering decidnous trees do but little injury to a pasture, evergreen trees are very likely to kill out the grass under them, after they get large enough to shade considerable space of ground. The red cedar is no exception to this rule, but the trees do not spread their branches to a very great distance from the trunk, so they make a very good tree to set in pustures, especially near the sea shore, as they will endure the ocean winds and salt air as well as almost any tree that grows. In the interior the rock maple makes a good pasture tree, though the shade is more dense and injures the red maple. The black walnut is an easy tree to grow and makes a valuable timber when grown.

"This explained all. Falling on her knees she prayed for him who had written the acroll. And who was "Henry"?

Ten years ago he loved that same Maria and he would have made her his wife—for she had promised to be his—had he not taken to drink and gambling and finally forged the name of his employer, for which he was given a home in a convict prison.

The only sure remedy yet found is Brown's Iron BITTERS, and this by rapid and thorough assimilation with the blood purifies and enriches it, and rich, strong blood flowing to every part of the system repairs the wasted tissues, drives out disease and gives health and strength.

This is why Brown's IRON BITTERS will cure kidney and liver diseases, consumption, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, mala-ria, intermittent fevers, &c.

Mr. Simon Bianchard, a well-known citizen of Mayesville. Mande county, Kentucky, says: "My wife had been sick for a long time, and lar constitution was all broken down and sho was unable to work. He was advised to use Brown's Iron Bilters, and found it to work like a chara. We would not now be withean it for any consideration, as we consider it the best tenic in the world."
